THE HUNCHBACK'S WILL

Attempt of Relatives to thwart a Dying Man's Wishes.

"Burn It, Freddie!"—The Step-Mother and Sister of Frederick G. Dale, a Wealthy Young Man, Destroy His Last Will—The Deceased's Fortune Left to Miss Olga De Bottari, a Beautiful Young Italian Lady.

By Telegraph to the Post-DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, November 11.—A pale, wasted hunchback lay struggling in delirium on his deathbed, his agonized spasms in the Gramercy. In the dim, semi-darkness of the sick chamber, it was easy to see that the sufferer was near the end of his last agony. His bedstead stood two women and a physician. One of the women was a handsome matron, and the other young and handsome. Both were agitated, and the older held a document in her hand which the younger stood by the dying man's pillow with a lighted candle. The former was appealing to him to revoke a will. He gave no sign of comprehending them. The paper was placed in the thin transparent fingers of the sufferer, while the younger lady held the candle flame over the end of the will. "Burn it, Freddie!" said the older lady, and the hunchback, with a bitter retort, laid the paper aside. Then he made a faint movement. Then the nervous fingers of death relaxed their hold, and the powerless grasp, and again it dropped on the bed. But still the breath of the dying came fainter and fainter, and the eyes closed. The older woman beside saw the strength require for the effort had left him. A few moments later he died. The body was laid across the floor, the head bowed to breathe, and his form became rigid in death. On the floor by the bedside lay the paper which he had been trying to burn. It was alleged to have accompanied the last moments of Frederick G. Dale, and a statement of which will be made to-morrow. It was the stepmother of the dying man and wife of the late John G. Dale, the agent of the Human Line, and the mother of Mrs. Olga De Bottari. The paper described as being torn was

"W. HYDE, P. M., Office hours, Sundays, from 11 to 1."

The gas companies of St. Louis seem to have entered into a tripartite disagreement.

The appointment of Hyde probably means that the real work of the Post Office will be done on "the Corners."

ONLY two of the Post Office corners are at present occupied by bar-rooms. This deficiency should be promptly remedied.

ST LOUIS is now deeply interested in knowing whether a citizen who "signs the pledge" as a private individual is bound to keep it as a postmaster.

We object to the appointment of Hyde as a piece of machine politics, but what we object to particularly is that the appointment was given out until after the Post-DISPATCH had gone to press.

SENATOR COCKRELL really wishes a selection he can afford to disregard the needs of his brothers-in-law and the distribution of the federal offices. What he wants to do is to make himself solid with the railroads.

The introduction of an ordinance to authorize the Iron Mountain Railway Company to lay surface tracks across the streets calls for some explanation from the officials of the company to relieve them from the imputation of bad faith in their promises of an elevated road.

WHILE the Municipal Assembly is in session it may be worth while to remind the city fathers that St. Louis is swindled by a gas company, gouged by a bridge company, discriminated against by railroad companies, overtaxed by the State Board of Equalization, and treated by the Legislature as a conquered and tributary province. Any slight relief that may be accorded us from these evils will be greatly appreciated.

The bogus monopoly of the St. Louis Gas Company compels the residents of St. Louis south of Washington avenue to pay $350,000 a year more than they would pay for the same amount of gas if used north of Washington avenue. This is considered a pretty good revenue to pay to a king in one of the second-class kingdoms of Europe, but the citizens of St. Louis do not seem to have any idea that there is any escape from it.

THE Mercantile Library of St. Louis is an institution second only in importance to the Exposition. That liberal and enlightened spirit which put up the grand exposition building by a single effort is now called to support the attempt to give this grand library a building worthy of the city. The whole amount needed should be raised before the year is over, and another monument added to the evidences of our municipal greatness.

IT turns out that the order for the boycotting operations in connection with the stevedores strike at Galveston did not have the sanction of the Executive Committee of the Knights of Labor. As soon as committee reached the scene a satisfactory arrangement for the arbitration of the issue pending between the Mallory line and the Longshoremen was promptly made, and the wheels of commerce were again set in motion. The public is to distinguish between the work of the Knights of Labor, and that of the too previous members or officials who sometimes undertake to wield the whole authority of the order.

THE Catholic clergy of the United States undertake the active enforcement of the declaration of the Baltimore Council against Sunday liquor selling, it will introduce a new element into the Sabatianist agitation. Hitherto the Catholic Church, both clergy and laity, has held aloof from the whole Sabatianist movement, for motives easily understood by those who know the methods and ideas of that church. But now that a plenary council has expressed a strong condemnation of liquor selling on Sunday by members of the church, the whole movement against liquor selling has an ally whose effective power is greater than that of all the other influences yet brought to bear on the question. No other church has the same control over its members, no other church can compel the same obedience, no other church is as independent in its course. The declaration of the council puts the church on the same platform with the Puritans as far as this question is concerned, and it will be interesting to study the results.

M. HENRI CERNUSCHI

The anticipations of a destructive row over the silver question next winter may not be realized. They seem to rest upon the presumption that the controversy must take the shape of a fight between the gold monetarists and the silver mining interests. The former seem as eager to demonize silver as the latter are to have silver made our only metallic money. But between these extremes stand the great conservative business interests, opposed alike to a dangerous silver inflation and to the contraction and cornering operations implied in the complete demonetization of silver. It is understood that the proposition of the President and his Secretary of the Treasury will simply be to suspend for the present the further coining of standard dollars and leave silver where it is.

This proposition is supported by a great many earnest bi-metallists as a precautionary measure in the interest of silver. The most eminent of these is M. HENRI CERNUSCHI, who has agreed an arrangement with the leading nations on a basis of free coinage for both metals as essential to the success and stability of a bi-metallic currency basis for the commercial world or for any commercial nation. He holds that a suspension of silver coinage by the United States would be conducive to such an agreement, and that until the United States can see its way clear to the free coining of both metals its alleged bi-metalism is nothing but gold monetarism rendered "hump-backed" by the introduction of the ordinance to bring the Iron Mountain Road to the Union Depot by a surface track. Captain HAYES, who was at the head of the road last spring, declared emphatically to the press that the company had no intention of building anything but an elevated road, that it had had enough of surface roads in its experience with Poplar street. As the company has evidently determined to violate this agreement there is nothing to do but to organize and defeat the attempted imposition.

THE Post-DISPATCH.

It depends entirely on the degree of acquaintanceship between the parties. If young man No. 2 is not well acquainted with the party, he is guilty of an impertinence or an intrusion, whereas, among intimate friends, his offer would be a pleasant courtesy.

CHICAGO (Continued).

To the Editor of the Post-DISPATCH.

Will you please inform a subscriber in your next issue of the following case: A young man takes two ladies to church. Another steps up and asks him if he is a Christian. He says, "Yes." The man who was asked says, "I am not a Christian, but I am in the lady's place to accept his confession?"

HYDE has been refused a license to preach because he lived too expensively and dressed too fashionably.

THE Branch Penitentiary Commissioners, by rejecting Governor MARMADUKE's proposition to them, have made it obligatory on him to either approve or veto the warrant for the location at Louisiana. In the logic of his reasons for disapproving other locations agreed on by the Commissioners, Louisiana can read the doom of her hopes. In the freely expressed views of the Governor and the Wardens in favor of improving the Jefferson City Penitentiary and making it do for the present, the Commissioners have an assurance that they can confer the temporary enjoyment of this Branch Penit. bid upon several more ambitious towns before the Legislature meets again. It seems to be suspended by a string, like the bit of fat pork which hangs pendulous over a potato feast to grieve the throats of all guests when there is famine in Ireland. Mobility will probably have the next whack at it, as Auditor WALKER's heart probably yearns to re-establish neighborly relations with the liveliest city and biggest railroad center in his section of the State. Mobility is built on the great Randolph County coal field, is in the center of the wool and tobacco region, has water works, brick-clay, fire-clay, and boats of both transportation facilities and raw material. But she will probably get the Branch Pen, as all the rest have had it—only to dream on it for a little while and lose it.

THE Branch Penitentiary Commissioners, by rejecting Governor MARMADUKE's proposition to them, have made it obligatory on him to either approve or veto the warrant for the location at Louisiana. In the logic of his reasons for disapproving other locations agreed on by the Commissioners, Louisiana can read the doom of her hopes. In the freely expressed views of the Governor and the Wardens in favor of improving the Jefferson City Penitentiary and making it do for the present, the Commissioners have an assurance that they can confer the temporary enjoyment of this Branch Penit. bid upon several more ambitious towns before the Legislature meets again. It seems to be suspended by a string, like the bit of fat pork which hangs pendulous over a potato feast to grieve the throats of all guests when there is famine in Ireland. Mobility will probably have the next whack at it, as Auditor WALKER's heart probably yearns to re-establish neighborly relations with the liveliest city and biggest railroad center in his section of the State. Mobility is built on the great Randolph County coal field, is in the center of the wool and tobacco region, has water works, brick-clay, fire-clay, and boats of both transportation facilities and raw material. But she will probably get the Branch Pen, as all the rest have had it—only to dream on it for a little while and lose it.
